You cannot send a man to war and expect him to come home the same.

Don't underestimate the potential of young people.
With structure and sound leadership they can make an enormous contribution.

Try not to judge . . .
accept people for who they are.

Everyone has something to offer - find out what it is and foster it.

Under stress, people function to the best of their abilities Understand that and support them.

Learn about the context in which you are operating . . . it helps you understand how to respond

A photograph showing the interior of a military tent. On the left, a cot is covered with a white sheet. In the center, there is a pile of gear, including a rifle and a bag. On the right, a yellow flag with three red vertical stripes is hanging on a wooden post. The floor is made of wooden planks. The lighting is warm and comes from an opening in the tent.

If you want something, go and make it happen yourself.

Try!
